

Why We Talk About Money

Money talks and so should we! We are creating spaces for intergenerational conversations where students, parents, and educators go beyond financial literacy to build financial resilience. Together we look at money as a tool and financial decision-making as a personal path. As a community we develop an understanding of our personal relationship with money, new ways of thinking and talking about money, and the skills to take action and advocate for ourselves and others.

Making Change Happen Together

Talking about money in the classroom transforms lives. We begin building our financial habits at the same time we form our money personalities - around 6 years old and these habits stay with us for the rest of our lives. Early and ongoing financial education can increase intergenerational outcomes, including the skills to manage decision-making, navigate the unexpected, and chart the path to reach goals consistently. Our surveys show that school-based financial education programming can improve learning relationships, decrease stress, and increase understanding of financial concepts. It's never too early or too late for students to find their rhythm with finance and create change.

Who We've Worked With

in the words of one of our students:

"If I don't have a plan for my money,
my money will have a plan for me!"
